Local News Map Data

ABOUT THIS PROJECT

The Local News Map is a crowd-sourced resource that tracks what is happening to local newspapers, broadcast outlets and online/digital news sources in places across Canada. The map displays information going back to 2008, the start of a deep recession and a turning point for many previously profitable local news organizations. This report, which along with a copy of the latest data is produced every two months and archived here, summarizes the information available on the map.

The map displays markers that represent changes to free local daily newspapers, paid subscription local daily newspapers, community newspapers (published fewer than five days per week), private/public radio stations, private/public television stations and online/digital news sources, including online radio stations, newsletters, web-based digital news sites and other emerging online formats.

The following types of changes to local news operations are recorded on the map:

- the closing or launch of a news outlet
- service improvements such as a new or extended local television newscast
- service reductions such as a reduction in the number of times a newspaper publishes per week
- mergers of local news outlets that result in the launch of a new entity and/or the closing of an existing news operation
- local free daily newspapers that become community newspapers
- local paid-subscription daily newspapers that become community newspapers
- local news operations that shift to making content available online only

Map markers only reflect the most recent change at a news outlet so a digital site that launched in 2016 would show up on the map/in the data as a “new” online/digital outlet. If that news operation subsequently expanded service by, for instance, opening bureaus in nearby communities, the marker would be changed to a “service increase” marker and appear that way in the overall data. The marker description would, however, include information about the history of the launch and any other previous changes.

A local news organization is defined as a news outlet that maintains independence from those it covers, demonstrates a commitment to accuracy and transparency in reporting methods, and is devoted primarily to reporting and disseminating timely, originally produced news about people, places, issues and events in a defined geographic area.

When users click on a map marker, a pop-up box displays the name and owner of the news outlet along with information on what changed, the community name, when the change occurred, language of operation and links to the source of information about the change. Filters allow users to sort the markers by news outlet ownership, media type and type of change.

The information that registered users add to the map about changes to local newspaper, radio, television and online/digital news sources is displayed using color-coded markers. Map administrators also regularly add markers. The fact that the pace of change is steady but slow helps ensure the accuracy of map data because, with fewer than a dozen markers typically added each month, administrators are able to verify each crowd-sourced submission. This includes reviewing the contents of links that provide details of the change that has occurred. These links are published with the markers so the source of the information is clear to map users. The journalists, researchers, journalism students, media owners and community members who visit the site and are quick to point out errors also constitute a form of quality control for the data.

This project is the result of a collaboration between Professor April Lindgren, lead investigator for the Local News Research Project at Toronto Metropolitan University's School of Journalism and Associate Professor Jon Corbett, who leads the University of British Columbia's SpICE Lab (Spatial Information for Community Mapping). Funding for this project has been provided by the Rossy Foundation, the Ken and Debbie Rubin Public Interest Advocacy Fund, the Canadian Geospatial and Open Data Research Partnership, the Canadian Media Union/CWA Canada, Canadian Journalists for Free Expression, a Mitacs Accelerate grant, Unifor and Toronto Metropolitan University.

Worth noting

General

- between 2008 and August 1, 2023, a total of 482 local news operations closed in 338 communities across Canada
- community newspapers, which publish fewer than five times per week, account for 76 per cent or 364 of those closings
- 216 new local news outlets launched between 2008 and August 1, 2023, in 154 communities

A special report published in mid-2022 that examined the effects of the pandemic on news media in Canada suggested difficult times may be ahead given the end of government COVID subsidies and uncertain prospects for a major recovery in advertising. Recent developments suggest those difficult times are here.

Since the last report on the Local News Map data, BCE Inc. announced the layoff of 1,300 people and the closing of six local radio stations. Bell Media, which is part of BCE, also told the federal telecommunications regulator that its 35 local television stations are under financial strain and asked for major reductions in local news content requirements. If the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) agrees, Bell Media's television stations in major markets will no longer have to broadcast six hours of locally reflective news per week. In smaller markets, Bell wants permission to broadcast fewer than three hours of locally reflective news per week.

Map data on the cancellation of newspaper print editions also point to ongoing challenges in that sector. Notably:

- In October 2022, SaltWire Network cancelled the Monday print editions of its four daily newspapers - the Cape Breton Post, Chronicle Herald, The Guardian, and The Telegram.
- Since June 2022, Postmedia Network Corp. has been announcing the cancellation of some or all print and e-editions at many of its daily and community papers. Map markers for 36 Postmedia publications have been updated to reflect these changes. Most recently, the company decided to shift 12 community newspapers in Alberta to digital-only formats as of February 27, 2023.

Since the last Local News Map update on June 1, 2023, nine new markers representing changes to local news media were added to the map including four from previous years that came to our attention. Among the changes:

- A new marker was added for the launch of a radio station: 89.3 The Raven (CIWE-FM) launched in 2021 in Edmonton, Alberta.
- A new marker was added for an online news outlet that increased service: Windspeaker.com, which serves Indigenous communities in Alberta, added a weekly newsletter in 2023.
- Three new markers were added for community newspapers that closed due to mergers: Star News Publishing merged Triangle News, Radville Star and Deep South Star to form the South Central Star regional newspaper serving communities in southern Saskatchewan in 2017.
- Four new markers were added and two existing markers were updated to reflect radio stations that closed when Bell Media announced the closings as part of a corporate restructuring in June 2023.

Overview of map data
